Australia Sends $500,000 Exhibit to the Exposition

O'Neil Sevier, One of United States Commissioners Returning to America, Reports That Antipodes Regard Panama-Pacific Project Very Favorably.

Australia will spend upward of $500,000 for representation at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915, and New Zealand another $200,000. This is the prediction of O'Neil Sevier, one of the United States commissioners appointed last fall to visit Australia and New Zealand in the interest of the great fair at San Francisco.

Sevier has just returned from the Antipodes.

The commissioners made a complete tour of the states of Australia and New Zealand in October, November, and December. They found that the sentiment of the people was in favor of participation in the exposition, authorized to celebrate the opening of the Isthmian waterway.

"The sentiment of the majority of the people of Australia," said Mr. Sevier, "was expressed pointedly at a dinner at Parliament House, Melbourne, given to the members of the commission by the Victorian government of Victoria by Mr. William A. Watt, the premier, when he said: 'There seems to be some disagreement between the imperial government and the United States as to the right to tolls on coastwise traffic through the Panama Canal. While we in Australia desire to see the relations between the United States and the empire friendly in all things, this is a matter with which Australia has no concern.'

"We, as a nation, will benefit more by the opening of the Panama Canal than any other people on earth. The Panama waterway brings us nearly 4,000 miles nearer the great markets of the Atlantic seaboard of the United States than we were before, and some 40,000,000 people within a ride of a day and a half or two days of New York want our meats and dairy products. It is incumbent upon us to secure with the least delay the completion of the waterway."

The commissioners also found that the people of Australia and New Zealand were very much interested in the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and that the people were very much in favor of the Panama-Pacific project.

elections. While the state premiers in office when we reached Australia had succeeded in holding their own they had not had time to get together to form a definite plan for representation at San Francisco. But Mr. Watt promised $250,000 from Victoria, Mr. Johnston guaranteed an equal sum from New South Wales, and Queensland promised another $250,000. The states of South Australia and Western Australia promised $100,000 apiece. The federal government has appropriated $250,000.

"West Australia will not make an appropriation. The prevailing opinion in West Australia seems to be that the opening of the Panama Canal will divert from Perth and Fremantle business that now comes through Suva."

Women at Picnics. "Traveling through Australia is very much like traveling through the United States. Sydney, the oldest and biggest place in the commonwealth, suggests Boston. Melbourne, with its prodigiously wide thoroughfares, reminds one of Washington. Adelaide, the metropolis of South Australia, is very much like Detroit. The cities of New Zealand are very American in appearance and the people are even more like Americans than the Australians."

The attitude of the people of both the commonwealth and the dominion toward Americans is more cordial and friendly than toward Englishmen.

The prime minister of New Zealand, William Massey, has appointed Mr. Edmund Clifton, director of agricultural stations of the department of agriculture, New Zealand's commissioner to the exposition. Mr. Massey assured us at a state luncheon that New Zealand would be adequately represented at San Francisco. The Dominion Parliament had not, when we left, made a definite appropriation, but we were assured by members of the government that it would not be less than $40,000, or $50,000. The New Zealanders and Australians are great travelers and it is predicted that 50,000 will visit the fair.

"Horse racing is the great sport of the people. In Australia, indeed, racing may properly be called the national amusement. The other members of the commission and myself attended a prize fight one afternoon in Sydney and the governor had to get out from behind the picture hats of a couple of comely young women to see what was going on in the ring. The race of the women going to the prize fights all over Australia."

taken up at its annual production. The trustees of the Church of the Covenant placed at the society's disposal the chapel with light and heat, for all rehearsals, and the church for the rendition of the oratorio. Admission is by invitation only, as the sale of tickets for the use of the church is not allowed. The cost of music, printing and the services of an organist make the total expense of this one production nearly $300.

The board of directors feel that the society is doing much for the uplift of the standard of music in this city than any other organization. Oratorio, the most majestic of all music, is fast being put on one side for the lighter, popular and less classical productions. By all true lovers of sincere art this is deeply deplored.
